

maison parisienne is pleased to introduce you to: Spotlight on Jérôme Blanc!

Jérôme Blanc, Woodturner

Born to a family of craftsmen, Jérôme Blanc was raised in his father's workshop. After graduating in cabinetmaking and carpentry from the École des Arts et Métiers (School of Arts and Crafts) in Geneva, Switzerland, Jérôme traveled the world. In Australia, he discovered woodturning, which soon became a revelation. Back home, he continued to train under master woodturners, before opening his own workshop, dedicated to contemporary woodturning.

maison parisienne and Jérôme Blanc have been working together since 2011.

“I work raw wood. Still wet from the forest, it will dry, distort and take on new shapes under my tools.”

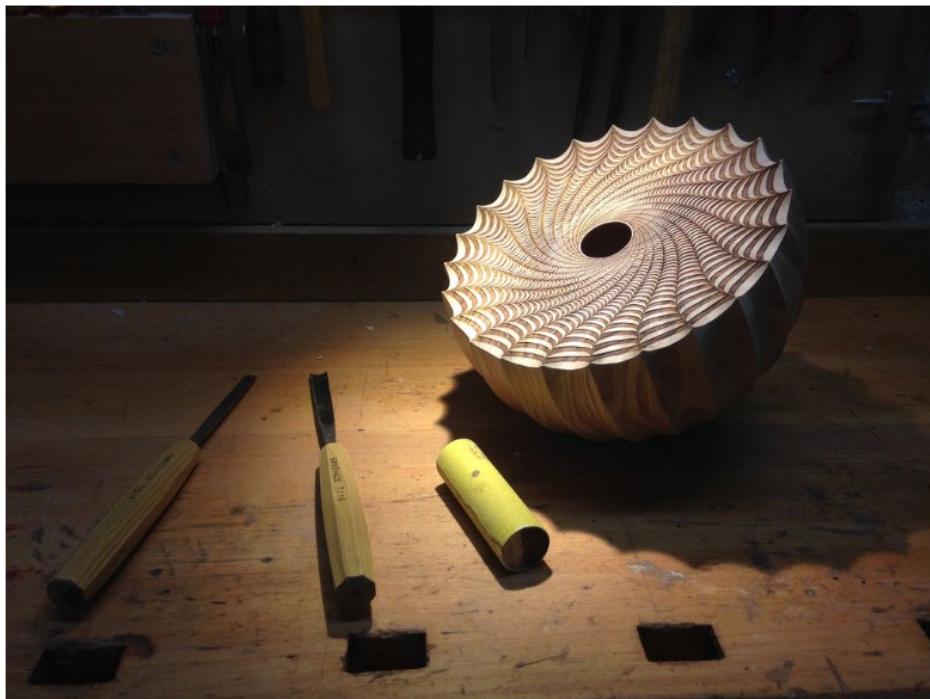

To create his sculptures, Jérôme uses local green wood that he hollows out and works until it becomes as thin as paper, and just as light. The sculpture takes form, first with clean lines and sleek shapes, then with intricate carving, geometrical patterns, multi-layered textures and subtle nuances.

"Wood never ceases to surprise me. It is in turn soft, hard, brittle and flexible. It can look like fabric, or stone, or even ceramics."

Jérôme Blanc questions the very materiality of his artworks, and beyond that, he questions the compatibility of materials, and in particular the relationships between wood, glass and metal. Throughout his career, he endeavored to translate his sculptures, working with masters glassmakers and bronze-smiths to reach either a striking contrast between the materials when the identity of the shapes is maintained, or perfect trompe l'oeil that make it impossible to distinguish between metal and wood, save for the sense of touch. In any case, his vibrant collections are always as elegant as they are audacious.

Jérôme Blanc creates elegant artworks inspired by nature. Surprising and complex, they open up a dialogue with the very fibers of the wood and require incredible precision and high-end expertise.

Jérôme Blanc's work has been exhibited numerous times in France, in Europe and in the United States. It has been part of every maison parisienne's exhibition since 2011.

Jérôme Blanc, New Collection: Terre

Jérôme Blanc's Terre series is a singular collection with complex shapes, ruled by impeccable craftsmanship and minute technique. Between natural erosion and symbolic corrosion, between ancestral know-how and high technology, each piece is thought-provoking and opens on a world of sensations.
